The screenshot shows the La República website in Internet Explorer. The browser address bar displays <http://www.larepublica.pe/#participa>. The page content includes a header with navigation links like 'ARES', 'sofonic', and 'BUSCAR WEB'. The main article, titled 'REPORTERO CIUDADANO', features a photo of a man presenting to an audience. To the right, there are several interactive elements: a poll titled 'ENCUESTA' asking '¿Es la corrupción el principal problema del gobierno?' with 'Sí' and 'No' options, and a section for 'ESEEMESEE' featuring a user named Gisela Valcárcel. The Windows taskbar at the bottom shows the system clock at 10:11 a.m.

This screenshot shows a different section of the La República website. The browser address bar remains the same. The main article, 'Julica 43 y Puno 27 millones para inversion', discusses provincial investment projects. Below the article is a poll titled 'ENCUESTA' asking '¿Breyner Bonilla es el refuerzo que necesita Cristal?' with 'Sí' and 'No' options. Other visible elements include a 'FORO' section with a question about Camisea contracts and a 'MI MASCOTA' section. The Windows taskbar at the bottom shows the system clock at 10:11 a.m.
